Important Information

* It is your responsibility to submit the correct file type for assessment as specified in the 'assignment information'.

 It is your responsibility to ensure that the file that you have submitted for assessment is functional and viewable, a submission receipt does not guarantee that the file you have submitted works. You should always check once you have submitted that the files are viewable.

Just as you would not be able to sit an exam in the incorrect venue or on the wrong day, your work won't be marked if you submit it into the wrong place or fail to submit it correctly, and you won't be emailed if you forget to submit on time. We expect you to manage your time and take responsibility for submitting the correct version of your work, in the correct place, before the deadline. Errors will not be able to be rectified after the submission deadline.

Guidelines for formatting written assignments

- Ensure all pages are numbered
- There is no need for a “cover sheet”, but the first page should always include the total word count and full title of the work
- There is no standard font style you must use, however please ensure that the same font is used throughout the entire piece of work.
- Ensure that a margin of no less than 2.5cm or 1 inch is on the left-hand side of each page.
- Do not 'right justify' the lines unless the system can produce equal spacing between the words.
- Put a blank line between paragraphs, or adjust line spacing so that there is sufficient space between each paragraph.
- Use double or one and a half spacing, as opposed to single line spacing.
- Avoid having the first line of a new paragraph or a single heading at the bottom a page.
- Do not leave a space in front of any punctuation mark, such as a comma, full-stop, colon, or question mark.
- If you include any notes, other than bibliographic references, they must be numbered and given as footnotes to a page.
- Do use a spell checker, if one is available with the word-processing software you are using, to help identify potential spelling errors and typos.
- For guidance on the use of AI based writing tools such as Grammarly or Google Translate, please refer to the AI Guidance in the Assessment Brief.
